The chants didn't hit much, but they didn't need to. Bases on balls, fielding flaws by the Reds, long hits by the Giants and most of their safeties planted in fertile spots made run getting a sinecure for the champions. A wide rift in their armor this year har been lack of timely propriately produced, especially the distance driving of Merkle and Fletcher, who between them bagged a double, two triples and a home run.

Eight runs off of six hits is a big departure for the Giants and not an every day occurrence in the most prosperous circles. Half of the hitting was done off Ames, who retired because there was no use keeping him in any longer and not because he was batted out, and half off of Fittery, a left hander with a quick | minute windup which went off like an alarm clock—not as to noise but as to suddenness. The Giants didn't strain themselves after the first liming and the very good pitching of Al Demarce for the most part reduced Cincinnati to inertia and inutility. Demarce was effective with most and Berry.

Cochran's Royal Martyr was a soft spot in the second race for two year olds and galloped home with a margin of three lengths on Rhine Maiden.

The fourth race, for selling platers, was the only one in which there was an element of real racing and in this Mr. Sniggs and Perthshire closed equal choices. Mr. Sniggs was in front all the way, but his backers were in jeopardy when he made the turn into the stretch, as he ran a trille wide. Stewart got him straightened before any real damage was done and he staved off the challenge of Be to win by a length. The last race was just a gallop for John O. Talbott's Jawbone, which won by four lengths from R. O. Miller's Orotund. The summaries:
